

friend who was one of our students and this fellow persuaded him to take the extra year and come with us. And about two months later ~~XX~~ a man was here speaking in chapel that this fellow knew and I happened to over hear him. He said to him, "You know I've learned more in one month here than I learned in a year in Yale." He worked hard.

So we don't cut down. We don't shorten the time. We don't make it easy. I know of another seminary not far from here where a man preached in missions every night in the week, worked 40 hours a week in a defense plant, and got through with flying colors. You can't do that here with us. We believe that God's worship entitles Him to your full time

We believe that three years is very, very short for a theological . We go in for high standards. We know it would be very easy to get the work from outside and take so much time at it you just couldn't the lessons and so we make a very rigid rule against more than a certain amount of outside work

We insist upon A credit with us means three hours of work. It doesn't mean one hour of sleep and two of class. It means three hours - an hour in class and two hours of study or two and a half hours of directed study and drill it's three hours full of work is one credit We believe that God We believe that training of the mind without training of the spirit is worthless. At Westminster when I was there we had a chapel service of fifteen minutes every morning - they'd have one hymn, a reading of a chapter of Scripture, and a prayer We had that every day Our chapels here are one hour twice a week and half an hour three times a week. We try to vary it a

If you think the chapel is not worth while coming then it's not, but don't stay away. We expect every student there and it may be that one hour is not worthwhile for you but it might bring blessing to some others of the people there. We try to make it varied, we try to keep it vital

Every student at each of those chapels. We don't give any cuts here. I know in college it's a great privilege to cut - you~~XX~~ don't have to go to someone's class. But we don't believe in that. We believe

Of course if you're sick, we're very un-
