got a list at the postoffice down in Santiago of stuff they would send out to be dropped to _____ and they got this list of packages that were all prepared and he would pick out certain ones and he would send the numbers down to Santiago and then Santiago would read them out--number twenty-five, 173 and 92 and so he would take these and put them in a plane, fly them up there to Kingman, Arizona, put them in another _____ plane, come over and drop them, and so one morning the boys saw a plane come over and a package dropped and they ran out and got it and they found a note in it. It said, "This package contains twenty-five packages of _____ tablets, twenty-five packages of sulphathiazol and so on, all sorts of first aid material;" then it said, "There will be three more packages, the second will contain as follows, the third as follows, and they weren't so interested in the second and third, but the fourth package contained tomato juice and orange juice and grapefruit juice and if you have ever been marooned in the blazing hot canyon the thought of juices has sounded mighty good and so they could hardly wait for that fourth package, and then when the fourth package came, they rushed out and they grabbed it and they tore it open-- but someone in Santiago had made a mistake and gotten the wrong number, and instead of juices they found canvas to put on a rigging outside a life raft to cover it over so it couldn't be seen from the air. Well, it was quite a disappointment. How wonderful it is, as God provides us our provisions, if we are true followers of His as He sends us from above everything that we need, if something comes that seems to us to have no point in it, which doesn't seem at all to be what we want, we know that God makes no mistakes, and that actually what He sends is what we really need and what is best for us. Well, the boys were pretty well taken care of, aside from a few disappointments like this, but they got pretty lonesome. One of them said to me later, he said, "I got to thinking, 'If I ever get out of this place I'm going to go to the biggest city I can find, I'm going to stand on the busiest corner there and just watch the crowds go by!'"
