

that I have a good memory for names but a very poor one for faces. In just about every case the person has answered, "I'm ~~just~~ just the opposite; I have a good memory for faces and a very poor one for names."

That seems to be the normal situatio-. I am very unusual in that regard. Actually it is a real disadvantage. If one recognizes the face and know for certain that it is a person whom one has known, it is not so difficult to ask for a name. If ~~one~~ one ~~knows~~ knows the name, but does not recognize the face it does not doo him any good.

When I was introduced to baseball I did not quickly learn much about it or take much interest in it. When I was about twelve there was brief period in which I played a game, the name of which I do not remember where one person would be catcher, ~~and~~ another pitcher, another first baseman, and others in other positions if there were others, but it could be played by any group of four. ~~At~~ A batter would continue until he was out put out, at which time~~h~~ he would assume the lowest ~~in~~ place; the batter would move up; the catcher would become batter; the pitcher become catcher, the first baseman would become pitcher. I played this game a fair amount and enjoyed it, but after a few~~y~~ years forgot about it.

It was many years before I learned much about really learned what football was all about, although when I was in my first half of my high school course in Michigan I enjoyed seeing the first team with its large men, as they seemed to me then, ~~rolling around in the mu~~ rolling around in the mud.

In my late teens I learned a little about playing tennis and occasionally I played it and enjoyed it, ~~but~~ but when my nerves were tired I would find it very difficult to remember what the score was, and soon I ceased to play it at all frequently.

When ~~Near~~ Near the end of my year in 8t- grade one of the other boys came ~~to~~ to me and said that he was very anxious ~~to~~ to get into high school, and would I give him ~~me~~ some help in his lessong. I offered to give him some help in that and he could return it by giving me some help in acquiring better facility in throwing balls, etc. He ~~is~~ He (nc?) We did this for a brief time and succeeded in getting into school, but I rarely saw him after that. I do not know whether he
