

that would particularly reach people who knew about me, ~~ix~~ instead insisting it be only ~~ix~~ through his own mailing list, and ~~ix~~ thus he being the source of practically all the money that we got, and also he being the one who traveled a good ~~ix~~ bit and who tried to make contacts with various foundations, other organizations, keep up contact with donors, and so on, if he wished it that way I ~~ix~~ would make no objection. I particularly I must say I was glad to be able to devote myself to academic matters anyway.

The greater part of the $150,000 that he got in, bonds, that must be repaid later, having been used up, he issued another $150,00 worth of bonds to put the building into shape, and get things underway. under way. During the first few years salaries were generally as much as four months behind, and Dr. Murray would pay a salary to someone whom he felt had particular need. At the end of the first year he gave checks which brought things up to date and this meant that during that year I had to pay income tax on thirteen months' salary instead of twelve. During (nc) the subsequent time salaries were generally quite far behind and it was not a very satisfactory situation. ~~ix~~ Things went along for three or four years. Every time money would get rather low the president of the ~~bank~~ bank, who had great regard for Dr. Murray, would say, "Why don't you let me know you need money; we'll be glad to lend you some." And he was always ready to borrow some. Once he went south to visit some people, some of whom had very considerable means, and when he came back I was hoping he would bring a considerable sum of money. He came back very jubilant. He said a man ~~has~~ has lent me $25,000. I was not keen about having money lent which would have to be paid back later on. However, this was the way he desired to go.

After a few years matters were very tight in the seminary. Dr. Murray had asked for another loan from the bank and they said that he and his wife must sign, that not only must he sign for the money, but his wife must also. He felt this put his own house in jeopardy behind the seminary and was a little bit concerned about that. However, I believe they both signed, and some of the
