

week between Trinity in the Chicago area and the church in Dallas. Mr. ~~Kan~~ Koontz said that Johnson was a very fine teacher and very highly thought of. Dunbar mentioned Johnson also and said that Johnson had become a very strong five-point Calvinist and that he was no longer in sympathy with the Dallas situation. He also mentioned that the man who used to be professor of ~~Old~~ Old Testament, who wrote the paper that I wrote the reaction to which I ~~was~~ wrote my reaction for the Hermeneutics Conference (the name slips /me at the moment) that he was Dunbar had heard that this man had now become an amillennialist. This was in response to my remarking about him or asking questions about him.

I was much intersted in information about individuals at the seminary there but I was rather amazed at the frankness with which Dr. Dunbar discussed these various individuals. I can't think now of the names of whom he spoke first, but then he mentioned Gleason Archer. He said that he felt that Archer was extremely set in his views and that he follow~~ed~~ some ~~f~~ rather traditional views that are held by a rather large segment of people and simply held these without much thinking them through, and strongly stuported this particular group of views. He said that Archer was quite dogmatic and not particularly ~~like~~ liked as a teacher. He said that when Archer gives the course in Old Testament Introduction very few students take it, but when McComiskey (a graduate of Faith Seminary in 1956), who later took a doctor's degree at Brandeis), when McComiskey teaches this course there are a great many students enrolled in it.

Archer has written a number of tooks th-t are rather well received, most of them published by the Moody Press. I have enjoyed my own ~~kan~~ contacts with him. I mentioned that Archer was a very fine linguist--that one time when I was talking with him in South Dakota about a ~~kan~~ matter or interpretation of an Old Testament passage he ~~kan~~ pulled his Arabic Bible out of his pocket and looked into it to see how the passage was rendered there. Dr. Dunbar told me that after during the last two years Dr. Kantzer had been asked to become president of Trinity College, the college of Evangelical Free Church in the Chicago area.
