

very day on which it had been impressed on my mind that I would like to get in touch with him. The appointment was made for Friday.

Actually they did not get here until quarter of eight. Grace had a very nice dinner prepared. ~~XXXXXXXX~~ In the meantime I had tried to learn a little more about him. Wendy said he was an excellent student, that he was thinking of going to Drew this year, but did not know much more about him but thought that Mr. Liegel would. Mr. Liegel at first spoke as if he didn't know anything about him; then he mentioned, however, that it was his impression that he had his wife was quite artistic. I mentioned to Liegel the fact that I had been greatly impressed by Mr. Murphy's talk as one of the two students who gave a testimony at ~~xxxxx~~ the commencement last ~~spring~~ spring, but I could not remember specifically anything that he had said. Mr. Liegel said that he thought that the tape of the commencement was in the library. On Friday I tried to get access to such a tape, but learned the church had stated that they ~~prefer~~ preferred to make have anyone who was having a service there make a tape, that they would make it for us. Then the church said that the tape had been sent and nobody here has any record of receiving it. The church has not kept a record of it but sent along the original tape, so they say. It is good that this alerted them to the fact that the tape had not been received and possibly it can be located.

Immediately as we began to eat I asked Mr. Murphy how he had been converted, and the account was very interesting. He is of an Irish Catholic family. He became dissatisfied with the teaching he had been receiving. At one time he went to England for a year, and he became ~~h~~ greatly interested in Buddhism, and read books on it, but I think his interest ~~wax~~ waned in that. Then I believe he came back to this country and somebody in connection with Inter-Varsity gave him a brief but ~~f~~ ~~h~~ very clear account of the way of salvation which he rather pushed aside, out of his mind. Somewhat later he was in Washington, D.C. and alone in his room; there occurred to his mind a sin he had committed when he was four years old and he became very troubled about the recollection, and as he thought of it he remembered what this man had told him about the way of salvation and he looked to Christ for
