

how I used to give very long examinations and one time he had to make up one that he had missed ~~and he~~ (this was while he was an undergraduate) and when he found how long it was he was very upset, but I took him for a ^{walk} ~~walk~~ afterwards and we were again on good terms.

We had contacts off and on during the time that I was teaching at Westminster. He took graduate work ~~only~~ ^{only} during/one ~~year~~ year because the next year their first baby came and he I forget whether he was more tied down than before or whether it was a matter of having the finances of the trip. After two years he was called to the Collingswood ~~KK~~ church to succeed Dr. Laird. I went to the installation service and I remember how young and immature he looked beside Dr. Laird. And I remember Dr. Laird's charge to the congregation to love Carl McIntire as they had loved him. He had been a year or two or three ~~at~~ ^{four years} at the Collingswood church when I left Westminster. Oh, I should mention though hearing about his farewell ~~at~~ service at Ventnor. Someone who was there said that ~~they~~ the atmosphere was positively one of terrible tragedy as people were weeping all over the place, as he held his final service. They said (are you quoting one or more persons?) they had never seen as emotion-filled place as was there when the people were leaving it. Dr. Machen mentioned once how he had been at a meeting where different students or graduates were speaking and he said he realized as he heard Carl speak what a special unique ability as a ~~speaker~~ speaker he had. During the next-to-the-last year at Westminster some of the faculty taking an extreme position on emphasis on their secondary points of belief, and particularly of opposition to premillennialism which McIntire espoused, took a very strong attitude of hostility toward him. His brother, who was a student there, mentioned that he could feel an attitude of hatred toward him because he was McIntire's brother, as other students looked at him. This changed ~~in~~ a bit in the last year because then Dr. Machen, during that next-to-the-last year also was quite unpopular there and Dr. Machen used to get very upset about it. He said, "Why don't these students let them go to the meetings of the Presbyterian Lay Action Committee [I forget the precise name] and let them make a strong speech there in favor of the Reformed Faith,
