up and said. "Why don't you come back next week and tell us about it?" "O.K." he said, "I'll be glad to." So he came back the next week, and thus he did kaxek have time, or he would take time to come to speak about "the issues," but he would not do the other. One time he did come and give us a spiritual message and I'm sure he won more of the students to support than with any other message he ever gave. One time he phoned me and swa said that Dr. Springer, the evangelist from Colorado, was holding meetings in his church. Would I like to have him come and speak in the seminary--in our long chapel. I said, "Yes, I'd love to have him." I said, "Could you ask him to come on Tuesday and Thursday, and on the first talk tell us about his evangelistic work, with and about the tell us how he did it and about the experiences he had. Then he can come back the second time and discuss the issues." Carl said, "Well, Springer is very much his own ideas about things; I'm not at all sure he'll do as I tell him but he said, "I will and suggest this to him anyway." Springer came and when he began to speak he said, "I was instructed to talk today about examp the evangelism and not to ksay anything about the issues entil next time, and I was afraid that this might and I thought this was very stupid of him--to say that to the students as he started and thus possibly to destroy the whole effect of that approach. However, he then went on xixxe from that point to tell about his being led to the Lord and the beginning of his evangelistic work and exem some of his experiences and he gave a mankankanik most thrilling message and by the time he finished the students were just literally eating out of his hand. Then the next week he came over and told about his experiences with the Baptist convention and with modernishtic leaders and so on, and I was and although I didn't like the way he had started his first message I felt that my judgment had been fully supported by the effect of following the stategy that I had suggested. As the years went on Carl got mixed up in more and more things and he was the leader in practically all of them and he just had
