if there would be anybody who would hold that other view. Well, I'm beginning to think nearly everybody does except myself, or nearly everybody, so I am wondering. (Student) Well, we see the justice of God in dealing with the people we've known so that we wouldn't (student) to see His justice and to see—not to feel jealous, of course it is easy—you might say, God can take all jealousy out of our mind like that. Well He could do that right now but He doesn't right now. Among Christians in this world you will find plenty of real earnest Christians who are wondering why some other Christian gets a certain position or a certain opportunity, and we say, "Now I deserve it much better than he does." You'll find plenty of them. In fact, you'll find that every Christian some time in his life, I believe that every one some time in his life says, "Now, look here. They've called that man to that church and I could do a far better job than he could." "They've called this man to give this sermon, this important sermon at this special occasion, and I know that the sermon I would give would be much more used of the Lord. Why, I spend five times as much time in prayer as that man does, and I know the Lord far better than he does, and if these people only had sense enough to see the true situation, they would call me instead of him." Now I doubt if there is any Christian that doesn't at some time in his life have exactly that feeling. Well, now, ^{if} there are going to be differences of rewards in heaven, God can simply take all that jealousy right out of our minds and have us know that what He does is righteous and that's that, but I've always had the feeling that there was something which was us coming before the judgment seat of Christ and being made evident, now we would see perfectly clearly that this other fellow who we thought got a better deal on earth than we did, actually deserves a better deal and is getting the same in heaven, or we saw that this fellow ^{who} was rather insignificant on earth and did his work in a pretty small area when we did a greater work actually deserves the greater responsibility in heaven because the facts
