

come up over your hips anyway, yet when the water comes out with these sudden spurts it would go over your head so you have to see about how often they come and try to plan it so as to be sure not to be under when one of them comes, I would think that you could do that fairly easily. There is no great danger if you are careful. The other is that when you walk through it is well to do it in the early morning because if you do it a little later there are Arab women, at least there were when I was over there, where the water comes out of the pool washing their clothes and as you come through you muddy the water and they don't like it and they are apt to throw stones and pieces of mud at you when you come through. So it is well to do it in a time of day when they are not using it for washing clothes. 1880 it was discovered and it was put up by Sennacharib ~~ix~~ shortly before 700 B. C. by Hezekiah when trying to protect against Sennacharib shortly before 700 B. C.

(Question) Maybe he would have. As a matter of fact he didn't actually besiege Jerusalem at all. They did this hurriedly in order to protect the city from his coming. He was coming ~~from~~ from a long distance away. Whether he would have known that or not. I suppose before he came he put notices in all the papers that anybody who had photographs of the area around Jerusalem should bring them in in order that he could learn exactly what the situation was in different places. But even so you can't always guess sufficiently to know the full details of coming into a strange land far away like that. He might not know about it. They, of course, would cover it up just as carefully as possible. There are many stream beds in Palestine which are dry most of the year ~~and only~~ Unless he had someone who was familiar with the ~~ix~~ situation beforehand and knew that this one was always flowing there would be no reason to feel certain that there was a stream there. It would be a very unusual thing to do--to divert a stream like this and to dig like this on the ground. There would be a good chance that he wouldn't find it. It wasn't as if it were--¹ believe in this
