

other prisoner who was suffering the same misery that she was here, reciting this beautiful poem about a flower, she said, all the swamp and the marsh and the cold and everything around her disappeared and she said to this day when she remembers the beauty of that poem which was recited to her by this other woman when they were both suffering from that terrific brutality which is so prominent in our world today and I couldn't help being impressed how in the midst of the evil and the wickedness and the misery of this world, you get glimpses of the beauty that is here, the beauty and the glory and the loveliness that God has put into this world, we can't deface it altogether, we can't do away with it altogether, it is there and it shows up and in all the art and in all the types of literature and many types of beauty that there are, we have added evidence of the fact that this is indeed a good world. The Psalmist speaks of it frequently and elsewhere in the Bible of the beauty of the world in Ps. 103, 104, he describes the beauty of nature and God's watchful hand over all ~~the~~ works of nature. There is much in the Bible that deals with this aspect and there is so much in observation that it is easy for people to say, God is in His heaven, all is right with the world, and especially if you live in a Christian community where a great deal of the wickedness of the world is shut out, or at least in the land which enjoys the results and benefits of Christian background and we have much less of brutality than they have it is easy for some people to shut their eyes to the evils of the world and say, oh, this is a beautiful world, we are just going forward onward and upward forever, there is just a little bit of remains of insufficient development ~~which~~ but we are gradually moving forward and soon everything will be perfect. It is easy to come to that viewpoint because of the fact that there is so much beauty in the world. It is a wonderful world which God has made. There are those who say we have recognized God has made ~~the~~ world, we see ~~His~~ hand in it and that explains everything, but it doesn't. We need more, we need
