

now. My second point was simply definition, and then I wanted to consider the (4).
But a was pre-millennialism. b was Post-millennialism, and I want to get this distinction clearly in mind, that true-post-millennialism is a Christian view. It is a view held by people who say that they (4). I think they misinterpret it. But they do not knowingly reject.
And a true pre-millennialist - that is, post-millennialist believes in the great central doctrine of the atonement of Christ just as fully as any pre-millennialist does. It is altogether different from that which many people takes to be post-millennialism, which is this Kingdom of God business of E. Stanley Jones. Well now, c is a-millennialism. Rather, I am going to call c. a-millennial views. Because pre-millennialism is a definite view. Post-millennialism is a definite view. A-millennialism is a denial rather than a view. The very word -m pre-millennialism means Christ comes back, pre-millennial, before the millennium. (5)
