

that he felt that you wished he had. And you'd have to stand there while he prepared to take from you the money that you had that had been given you by a friend, and you had to sign it out, <sup>that you would give it to the government</sup> sign a statement ~~that~~ that it was voluntarily given with not compulsion whatever out of your desire ~~if~~ of great interest for the government. Now the way it affected some people when they were seized like that and they had heard from others about the terrible suffering they had gone through, they said, "We don't want to go through torture like that." And so the minute they were brought in there and they were asked if they had some gold, they said, "Yes, I've got $100 dollars worth of gold buried in the back yard, and would be glad to make it as a present." As so he said that immediately when they said that they decided against that policy because those who let on so quickly were tortured just as much or maybe more. And so he said that the people had to learn that the best thing to do was to stand a certain amount of torture before you submitted because then the inquisitor might decide that that was all you had, and you held out against them until you finally gave in. But if you give in immediately he would think you were just ~~grying~~ trying to hide and that you really had some more. You can easily see that in a system like that a person who didn't have anything at all might be submitted to terrific torture and there was nothing he could do. Well this was the gold mining of the Soviet Government which ~~be/za~~ caused Lyons to begin to lose confidence in the government. Now after the N

....that is the third internationalist. That is the attempt to carry on propoganda in othe other countries, and that of course is an entirely different problem than a control in the country. Som~~e~~body mentioned a ~~h~~l awhile ago the system is a control within the country and the chances of starting a great war <sup>(2 1/4)</sup> are practically nil, but the attempt with which other countries eye it would probably never be effected. In spite of the fact that you can't ~~grust~~ trust you own people after this last war when the Russian soldiers came back from Europe a great many of them were liquidated after their return. They had seen countries under a free eenterprise and they had seen how different life <sup>(3)</sup> which come under a man in power; and the result was that after seeing it they were dissatisfied, and a great many of them were liquidated. Today in East Germany where you have Russian forces
