

draw from Scripture. I think it is a point which we base on observation. We think it is right, now maybe we are wrong, it is a ~~xxx~~ matter for consideration. It is not a Scriptural point. Now there are many other things which are drawn which are, which may be highly debatable, but I don't think there are many people today who are using types in that way. My observation is that people today who go wild on types, and there are many who do, are people who get the truth they are representing from clear statements in the Scripture, in the main. And then, instead of presenting that truth, from the ~~statement~~ statement in Scripture that gives it clearly, they take a type that has nothing to do with it, but they present the truth. Well, now it ~~is an entirely different thing~~ is an entirely different thing, as you can see, from using the type as a source of gathering truth.

And I think that is important to recognize the fact that a, ~~now~~ now that we have the New Testament, that we have the full explanation of the fact of Christ's life, I think it is very important that we have at a minimum any gathering of truth from types. And I don't think there are many who do. A type is a divinely proposed illustration. Now before the coming of Christ it was necessary to gather truth from types. We saw through a ~~gixx~~ glass darkly. We still do. But that illustration can be applied to that. The tabernacle, the sacrifices, ~~many~~ many of the things told us in the Scripture are told, were told then, in order to give an apprehension, to give an idea of something important, to present an idea to the mind. Now people understood ~~xxx~~ these ideas more or less fully. They did not have the whole story of Christ. They gathered from these types certain ideas which were presented to their minds. Now those ideas are explained in the New Testament, because we have the actual facts of Christ's life. Now ~~we~~ we get the facts from the New Testament about these great doctrines, having gotten them, we find them presented and prefigured ~~in~~ and illustrated in the Old Testament. And the illustrations are useful to us and helpful and they
