(1½) But to actually say that they never sat down, that would be dangerous. Or to say that ~~xxxxxxxx~~ it is in any sense a divinely ~~ix~~ purposed illustration, but it could be used as an illustration.

(question) I don't quite get your words, second guess, I don't get what you mean. I think that we would have to say that there are many cases where the word in the Scripture is the only word which could possibly have been used. But there are many other cases where any of three or four might have been given and the one which is used is all right.
 Now another might be more precise, but it wouldn't be anymore true.
 We say, he sat on a seat. What was the seat? Was it a cushion, was it a chair, was it a sofa, what was it? You say he sat on a sofa. The statement that he sat on a sofa is no more true than if you say he sat on a seat. But it is more precise. And the same is true of grammar.
 Neither grammar nor words are absolutely precise. ^{In} The nature of language it can't be. And in ~~xx~~ every language there is certain ~~xxxx~~ types of precision which is brought out, which another may not bring out.

I was speak~~ing~~ to my landlady in Germany, one time, and I was telling her of the scrape I had in California, and I told her that I came out of the mountains and I asked a man for, I looked and there was no train for three hours, and I was in a hurry, and I saw a car coming along, and I ~~xx~~ waved to him and he stopped and said jump in. And I road in to Los Angeles with him. Well, I told this woman in Germany, my landlady, who knew ^{no} English, I told it to her in German, and I said the man said, and she she was just overwhelmed. And of course over there they had such very few cars it was something quite contrary to German life. And I thought that she was overwhelmed at the car.
 And she said, "He called you thou, he used the familiar form of discourse," and she was shocked that a stranger, and I were to get into his car, and he would address me as thou. I should have used the polite form of discourse, but I used the familiar form. Now in English,
