

read her book you find her ~~for~~ often very critical of things in America here. She often speaks of how much better the Chinese attitude is, and how much ~~more~~ more cultured and kindly they are, they wouldn't think of ~~the-ix~~ trying to put their religious ideas off ~~onx~~ you. They respect you to have your ideas and they have theirs and so on, and as you read, many of these statements that she makes in the book, that she thinks that Chinese culture and civilization, Chinese attitude toward people is very superior to the attitude we ~~have~~ have in a country with a Christian background, and yet as you read the incidents which she describes, which somehow didn't make an effect on her general appraisal, it's very strange to see how she could have the conclusions she has and still describe the ~~inc-~~ incidents that she describes, for instance, she tells how in a Chinese home, they wanted boy children, and if they had one or two girls that was quite enough, and if more ~~girl~~ girls were born, the father would simply take a big rock and kill the child, and she tells about a woman who worked in her family for years, and the way that ~~she~~ they got this woman was that her husband, ~~but~~ she had three children altogether, all three were ~~girl-ix~~ girls, and her husband had in each case, taken a big stone and immediately killed the child, and when her family ~~ix~~ took an interest in this woman, the woman was absolutely devoted to them, and actually saved her life ~~and~~-at that time, and then you read an account of the end of the Manchu Empire, and she tells how her mother was in the house and she saw outside creeping around in the trees the woman of the Manchurian class. ~~There~~ There were perhaps a half a million or a million of these Manchurians ~~who~~-who had been the rulers for over 300 years over the Chinese, and they had the Manchus in every town, a few of them, and they had the fine houses and they had the big estates, they lived in luxury during
