

men kept very quiet. They waited for the proper time to make an uprising.

The time came when they heard of Allies advances. From the West the armies of the British, the French and the Americans had come within == were only 100 to 150 miles away. Soon they might reach them and they would have hope of rising up and getting rid of the foreign conquerors. ^{Better} Bitter news arrived. The great Soviet Army was only 30 miles away to the East. Any day now the Soviets could be expected to launch an attack upon the city. And uprising within the city would make it far easier for their liberators to gain possession of the city and Poland would again == and Warsaw would again be free. So the signal was given. Suddenly in all parts of the city people began to rise up against the representatives of the conquerors. Planes from the West dropped supplies and ammunition to them. They had faith that the Soviet army == armies would march in==an==a and attack, and soon victory would be theirs. The patriots fought desperately. The comparatively small number of German occupation troops however well equipped as they were were more than enough to take care of the patriots. If only the Soviets would move and attack they would be delivered and the city would be free, but the soldiers === but the Soviet army remained where it was. It did not take a step further in the direction of Warsaw. The best the Western allies could do was to drop ammunition and food to them, but this was not enough. The German troops succeeded in destroying all the leaders of the uprising, and most of their followers. The uprising of Warsaw was completely crushed. After this had occurred then the Russian army moved forward and took Warsaw from the ^{Germans} ~~Germans~~ with little difficulty. It had not been the aim of the Soviets to restore Poland to the Poles. Their aim was to get Poland for communism. They gladly saw the Polish patriots give away their identity and fight against the Germans and be killed by the Germans so that none would remain to resist the complete communization of Poland after the Russians took it. The Poles had confidence, they had ~~firm~~ faith in the ~~Russians~~ as deliverers. Their faith was completely misplaced. We are to question whether we are in the faith -- the faith of the Bible, the faith of Christ, the faith in Him who does all things well, the faith
