

speech. And people would sit, listen to his speech, go home and say well its content was wonderful but the delivery was (4 1/4)

He was elected president of the United States and as president his speech

He was completely different during his election

He worked on it, and today if there's a National Convention of which he is keynote speaker, or one of the rare occasions on which he speaks, because he's over ;80 now, if you have a chance to hear him he is a first-class speaker. But after 30 years of active vital work, of helping people all over the world after the first world war, directing all the relief work, and the Secretary of Commerce and President of the United States, then

But it is tragic this minister I mentioned, I think it;s tragic (5 1/4)

who will listen to what we say and say oh, I don't believe a word of it, I can talk just as good as anybody else. We had a student here once who talked as if he had mush in his mouth, you could hardly understand him, bright fellow, keen mind, got top grades in everything else, but

And I got him into this class and said to him, Now, let's see if you could read this poem by Longfellow, read it so we can just understand every word. Now, sail on, o ship of state, sail on, I forget the exact words, but to my amazement he took that poem and he gave it so you got every syllable just as clear, it was beautiful, And after that, nearly every class I made him recite that poem and I said to him, now when you speak (6 1/4)