

fully, thoughtfully, prayerfully and constantly.

The man who is described in our text is compared to a tree planted by the rivers of water that bringeth forth his fruit in his season. Why is a truly blessed man like the tree? It is because he draws his sustenance from the Word of God - his roots go far down into the rivers of water that God has provided for the nourishment of His people. With such a source for his strength, who could be other than fruitful?
