In my opinion it is the duty of everyone to examine the teaching to which he is exposing himself. If the leadership and control of the group has come under the hands of those who deny God's Word it is very vital that we steadfastly oppose such teaching and do not subject ourselves to it or do anything that would lead others to feel comfortable in submitting themselves to such teaching. On the other hand I think we should recognize that these facts are often not understood by God's people, and that we should maintain a friendly attitude as far as possible and should attempt to win people out from under unbelieving teaching rather than to make a sharp line that is so sharp that it results in decreasing our influence in winning such people.
