

honor for parents is shown by living as they would have us live~~x~~ and doing what they would have us do, in the Lord. It is noticeable that honor to parents and honor to the Lord are demonstrated in the same way.

The home is a place where growth may be accomplished as in few other places. It is an institution given by God. How thankful we should be if we have Christian homes, where the Bible is placed at the center of everything in life. There, ~~As~~ if anywhere, a young person should be able to grow spiritually and physically. Few of us ever ^{fully} ^{show} realize ~~the~~ great a privilege we have had, until after we have left it.

It is true that not all young people have the advantage of a Christian home. Yet God has implanted in most parents a love for their children and a desire to bring them up right. ~~not~~ Many a non-Christian parent has been himself brought up in a Christian environment, and can pass on to his children much that is good, even if he himself has not yet accepted Christ.

Except in those few cases where parents actually hate the Word of God, and forbid children to go to church or Sunday School, it is the duty of the children to obey their parents, even if the
