

ways: It could be done by forcibly exiling them to some distant area; it could be done by locking them up in prisons; it could be done by putting an end to their lives. The overwhelming mass of people surely have a right to protect themselves from the small group that desire ~~===~~ that is ready to injure them and that is already depriving them of their right to have freedom from fear. This should be the purpose of the justice system. Such matters should be carefully and thoroughly investigated so that the ~~innocent~~ innocent will not lose their rights but it should be ~~be~~ ~~carried out~~ ~~effectively~~. e

I have sometimes heard it ~~said~~ said that it is better that one guilty person go free ~~===~~ that 10 guilty people go free than that one innocent person be punished. It would seem to me that from the viewpoint of the good of the mass of people it would be far more correct to say: Much as we would regret having one innocent person lose his rights it is far better ~~x~~ for one innocent person even to lose his life than for a person to be allowed to go free to rob and kill ten innocent people.
