

It was rather disappointing when I presented a summary yesterday morning of what I consider to be very valuable insights useful both for Old and New Testament study of the results of nearly six months of intensive examination of an area that is at present widely discussed among theological scholars, to find that there was not a single member of the faculty who thought the presentation worth hearing. I know that ~~you all~~ ~~all~~ have their own activities and some have special ~~duties that take~~ ~~duties~~ at this time that deserve their full attention, ~~and~~ this is not a criticism of their work but a statement of disappointment that ~~my own~~ ~~intensive activity should not be considered~~ that others do not consider my intensive work of the past few months to be of much importance.
