

Development —

14.09

Inaccuracy — Shaping Adam from clay with his own hands —

Smart, James D., The Interpretation of Scripture (Philadelphia: The Westminster Press) 1961

p. 170 It is likely that J's extremely anthropomorphic description of God's dealings with man, shaping him from the clay with his own hands, operating upon him to remove a rib from which to form Eve, and going looking for him in the Garden of Eden in the evening, gave P some distress.

See John Bright, The Authority of the O.T. (1967) XI-74