Dear Mr. Eggenberger:

Probably it is too late for you to receive a contribution from me in archeology for the new issue. However, in case it is not, you will find something enclosed which might be inserted.

In case it is too late for this issue, please send it back to me and let me know your dateline for the following issue, and also about what your space requirements are and I will try to get it back to you, somewhat augmented, well in advance of the date that you set.

The rush of the closing weeks of school has recently been in full swing, and it has been very difficult to find time for preparing something. As a matter of fact, our Synod for the next week will also be very busy and so I have dashed this off rather hurriedly. If you have abundant material for this issue without it, and would prefer, instead, something better prepared for the next issue, this will satisfy me very well.

You deserve great commendation for being willing to carry on this important work of editing the journal and ought to receive better cooperation than I have given you thus far.

Cordially yours in Christ,

Allan A. MacRae
