

are suffering under the iron heel of Communist despotism. It is to be doubted whether in a free election, preceded by free discussion, as many as ten per cent of these people would vote to remain in the slavery to which they are at present subjected. Russia was conquered by a very small group of men, acting in direct defiance of the votes of the Russian people, and has ever since been held by trickery and slaughter. China, after struggling for its liberty for a decade, was exhausted and readily conquered by a small group of Communist devotees. Now hundreds of millions of fine people are held in ruthless bondage. Is it nothing to us, we who pass by? Is it nothing to us that they are thus tortured and ruthlessly mistreated, and forced to listen to lying propoganda that denies the God that created the universe, and that assails all that is good and right in the world. If the leaders of our countries are so filled with selfish thoughts, so concerned only for their own peoples and for their own skins, that they are unwilling to do anything to stop this terrible brutal force that is in the world today, it may well be questioned whether our nations deserve the mercy of God at all.

It is dismaying to have to notice our fifth point:

5. The proponents of this other religion have control of the leadership of the WCC.

Before the unprovoked aggression of North Korea had aroused such strong anti-Communist feeling in this country, modernist leaders frequently made statements praising various aspects of the Russian system. An instance in point is a note which I happened to see in a Methodist Sunday School magazine, a few years ago. It read something like this: "Russia made a suggestion in the United Nations that all the nations should disarm. Nothing was done about it. Russia has again made the suggestion that all the nations disarm. Nothing has been done about it. Surely it is time that the western nations did something about carrying out this excellent Russian suggestion."

Recently congressional investigators have been examining the names which appear on the letterheads of Communist front organizations. It is amazing how
