nothing of the sort is inted intended in it or properly derivable from its notes.
There are others who rejoice in the word dispensationalism who divide the Bible up into many small sections which they say have men-- meaning only for a certain particular periods, leaving only a very small section of the New Testament as have- having relevancy for k Christians of today. This extreme type of dispensationalism is repute repudiated by the great bulk of Christian people.

When it comes to the term a Covenant Theology, this unfortunately is used by many different people in entirely senses. There can be no doubt that the New Testament teaches that God makes a coventa covenant with His people. When we believe on Him , we do not then ree--reciev- receive salvation and if our faith wonders a little loose the salvation and then have to be saved over again.
If one is really saved and ace- accepted the Lord Jesus Christ as X Saviour there is no question but that God hsx has entered into permanent covenant relationship with that person. It is wonderful to know that we don't have to hold our faith through .-if-the If the responsibl-responsibli responsibility of this rested on us most of us would fail. God has promised that He will hold us fast if we have accepted Jesus Christ as Saviour. We are in a covenant relation with k Him.

God has also made it clear that the children of believing parents stand in a k very special relationship. He has promised that if the parents do their parents in praying for the children and kx teaching the things of God, He will watch of over them and care for them and brng- bring them to Himself in His own time.
We do not believe that a Christian has to be constantly worried and in ax- anxiety a s to whether his children are going to be lost. He knows that if he does his part to the best of his ability and rests in the Lord and trusts in Christ that God will carry out the work of salvation in thier their hearts. We represent this confidence in our Saviour in the cre- ceremony of infant baptism, which we pre- performx'
