for including it. Mr.----? (Student) Yes. Oh, yes, He's coming in a cloud, certainly, but as to whether that would have to be years after He is born as a babe or whether the one who was born as a babe might ascend to heaven and come right back immediately or a week later, a month later, a year later--(Student) Yes. He couldn't be born in a manger and come in a cloud at the same instant and neither could He be born in a manger and crucified on the cross at the same time. There would at least be a period of time consumed in the event. That certainly is true. Mr. Heaney? (Student) There would seem to be in connection with the return an exhortation to the unsaved, but the primary inference would seem to be for the Christian, in the first place. Mr. Toms? (Student) That's what I want to find out, just what are the possibilities of this and the other passages. Now, supposing that somebody were to say to a little boy, were to say, "Now you be a good little boy because you wouldn't want your father to come in and find you all dirty. You keep from getting yourself all muddied up. Keep yourself clean. You wouldn't want your father to find you dirty." Well, now suppose he says, "Is father coming back?" and you say, "Oh, yes, father is coming. Now you be, you keep yourself clean, father's coming." Well, the boy says, "When is father coming?" Well, you say, "We don't know when he is coming. We don't know the day nor the hour when he is coming. All we know is that he is now on his ship headed for Japan and after they fight at Okinawa and Iwo-Jima and carry out the different battles and succeed in defeating Japan, and when we hear that Japan is defeated, then we know that some time soon after he is coming back, and we don't know the day or the hour, he may drop in on us at any time after that quite suddenly, so now you keep yourself clean." Well, I think a little boy would with any logic would say, "All right. That's very good. As soon as we hear that Japan is defeated I am going to start keeping myself clean." That is to say, that would be a good exhortation after the victory. You say, "Now we don't know when He
