places where the Lutheran teaching or the Calvinist teaching went in and a great work for God was built up and then the next generation, most of their leaders spent most of their time haggling over a little point of theology and taking certain features that were vital to Calvin and Luther but that were secondary features to them and developing them out of relation to the context to the point where they became the main thing and the salvation of souls from sin through faith in the Lord Jesus Christ which to Calvin and Luther was far more important than anything else in life was relegated into a back position. That is to say, "We, today, are facing an enemy; an enemy who is the prince of this world, and he has the power over this world in this age and every work that is built for God in this age, one of two things happens; either it is wiped out by the force of the enemy or it is corrupted. That has happened to every work through the ages. There is no one which has succeeded in evading one of those two results. Now if we stay close to the Lord and work hard the coming of either of those results may be postponed for quite a time but we are engulfed eventually. I don't know of a single work for God that has not fallen into one of those two eventually. Some have lasted five hundred years before it happened, most of them, it has come within thirty or forty years, and so, that being the situation, it would look pretty hopeless. Here when the people came to New England they would establish a place where they could worship God according to the teachings of the Bible. Well, what do you find today in New England--a turning away from God on every hand, the churches empty, modernism and unbelief has been taught in most places in New England for a hundred years now and it is the history right straight through. One extreme or the other and there is a definite, personal force behind it that is defeating; the prince of this world is Satan, but it will not always be so. A throne will be established in loving kindness and One will sit thereon in truth and He will judge and seek justice and be swift to do righteousness and God is
