

brutal of him not to do whatever Queen Mary wanted him to and she has been revered and idolized and she was indeed a very attractive and charming woman but her character was indeed such that any idolizing of her is a rather strange thing. Well that is sort of aside from our main point which is to see how the Reformation succeeded in Scotland and we want to go on to Number 5 - the An²~~ti~~-Baptists. I have been tempted to call this H - but since that which we want to speak about now briefly - the An²~~ti~~-Baptist movement in Europe was on the continent almost entirely - it would be quite anomalous to put it under this heading, "The Reformation in England". So we'll give it a separate head though we will deal much more briefly with it because the three big movements of the Reformation were Martin Luther, John Calvin and then the Reformation in England. And this is a movement which in itself would not have been particularly important, which would have died out completely were it not for the success of these other movements. Nevertheless it had relationships with them which were vital and it had had very important effects also on a far smaller scale. And so I give it a separate head, Roman Number V - The An²~~ti~~-Baptists. Now at this time when Luther began to preach / the right and duty of every believer to go to the Bible for himself and study it and see what it teaches, there were people who had no educational background or training, who began to feel that they could go to the Bible and whatever they found in it, they should stand on and that would be right and many of them felt that not only should they stand on it but they should force others to (3.) it. You remember when Luther was in he received word that these prophets had come to Vittenburg and they were beginning to say they were having visions from God, messages from God, they had all kinds of new revelations and you remember Karlsbad(?) carried things to such a point that he said God has hidden these things from the wise and prudent, revealed them unto therefore he said, "Just ask the most ignorant believer and find out what God
