because the nuns had taken a vow more severe than any of the monks had taken and some felt that it was ~~all~~ alright for the monks to ~~be~~ renounce it but the nuns were obligated for life. The vow was an unnatural vow, contrary to God's will and they were absolved from it and many of the ~~old~~ nuns came out and married ministers and there is alleged that recently in England, I think the niece or cousin of prime minister Baldwin was in a nunnery in England ~~to~~ she was there twenty or thirty years and eventually decided that she was wrong and wanted to leave it and she sent to the pope and she received a special dispensation from him freeing her from her vow and she came out and she wrote a book quite recently and highly sold which has been described how ~~after~~ she had been ~~completely~~ completely shut away and had never seen an airplane or a fast auto, and when she came out and saw she tried to enter into all the phases of life as it was and describes what a difference it was from her former life ~~I~~ I haven't read the book but reading the views you wonder how extreme a change seems to have been made. (question) Is that in Italy or in this country. I understand that in Italy today the law does not permit a man who formerly been a priest or a nun and left to take any position which brings him in contact with the public, he can work in a factory but he can not work in a store as a clerk. And it makes it very difficult ~~to~~ for people to find a living

Now of course that is an utter denial of religious liberty but it is the second law which the Italian government is enforcing now. (question) Well I think that is an over simplification but I think there is a big element of truth in it. That is to say, the part I was mentioning a moment ~~ago~~ ago that if these people instead of leaving the world and being off by themselves if they had been going off together a few years and r
