

Jerome, one of the worst things that anybody which anybody could do was to marry again after he had become after he had become a widower, or that a woman should marry again after she had become a widow. Both Augustin and Jerome thought that ~~it~~ that was one of the very worst of all possible sins. And so Augustin, in later years, bitterly reproached himself for the advice he had given Barnabas, because Barnabas fell into this particular sin. Barnafice <sup>fice</sup> went to a representative of the Roman government; he went to Spain, <sup>6 1/4</sup> Spee(?) and visited the government there as the _____ of the Germanic tribes that had seized Spain, taken it from the empire. And this was the tribe known as the Vandals. We noticed that a man from this tribe had been chief general of the Roman Empire, and had protected Italy from the Barbarian attacks, and it was after the emporor treacherously killed him that the Goths were able to come in and to sack Rome. Well, this was the same tribe, but Stilatal seems to have been- I don't know as I'd say, "Not typical of the tribe," but at least he was different from the leaders of it. I think that we have all too great a tendency to judge a people by its leaders. I think that is entirely wrong. I think you will find good people and bad people in every nation. In every race, in every group of people you will find very fine people and very bad people, but if the good people get in the position of control you are apt to think the whole nation is good, and if the bad people get into a situation of control, we are apt to think that the ~~whi~~- whole nation is bad. For instance, I hate to hear people talking about what Russia does or what te-- the Russians do. It is my impression that the Russians are as fine a people as there is on the face of the earth, that they are a very <sup>very</sup> fine class of people as a whole, a people that have the very finest potentialities, but you have perhaps 180 million people, and you have a group of not over a million of them who belong to the Communist party. And then the other 179 million are kept in absolute subjection, with at least 15 million of them in slave labor camps, subject to terrible treatment, and the rest of them in danger of their life at every instant, and this little group of a million--and not even this group of a million, I'm not sure that the cruelty that they practice is typical of the
