We had an experience in the Independent Board, a few ~~ya~~ years ago. There was a little group on the Board that decided that they wanted to run and control the Ind. Board, and they began to make charges against some of the men who had originally been the founders of it. Charges which, if there was any truth to them, would have been equally true when they joined it. And these people named these charges against the Ind. Board. Well, the charges were not true. Now, after these people resigned from the Board, a hot letter came from this woman. She said, in view of the fact that you are disloyal to your charter, and have turned against the purpose for which you were founded, I want you to give me my money back.
