- 81.10 Double reference principle questioned
- .14 Virgin birth
- 83.4 Double fulfillment principle dangerous
- AAM puts big space between 4:2 and what precedes.
- 23 "in that day" means the day I am going to talk about. It may be
- 1) the day at the end of the age or some other day.
 - 2) the day I have just been talking about or a new day
- Best expressed by the meaning "there will be a day" or I tell you, there will be a day.
- 84 Interpretation of Isa. 4:2
- 84.24 Meaning of "branch" - - agriculture here
- That which the Lord provides (in agriculture)
- The produce the Lord has provided
- A diff. Heb. word from that found in Isa. 11:1
- 86.23 Branch of the Lord and fruit of the earth are figurative rather than literal
- 87.1 The whole people are taken into consideration, not just women.
- .9 Meaning of "branch" cont'd
- Isa. 4:2 - "branch" - is this figurative speech?
- 88 Natural meaning is agriculture; figurative of a person
- .6 Three ways of interp. the verse
- 1) It is all literal - means agriculture
 - 2) It is all figurative - means Messiah
 - 3) Half and half - when Messiah is glorious and when the produce of the earth is excellent. Messiah and prosperity. Pre-crest of the 3
- .18 Isa. 4:4
- If refers to Messiah, then "branch" and "fruit" both refer to Him.
89. Is 4:2 Messiah or agriculture?
- Most commentators make it half and half
- that the "branch of the Lord" is Messiah, but
- that the "fruit of the earth" is agriculture
- .26 May be here a strong suggestion of Christ's twofold nature
- 90.3 Gap between vs. 1 and vs. 2 in Isa. 4. Shift in attitude.
- .14 cf. shift at 29:5 "and" - syntax in Heb. indicates a sharp change.
- .20 Isa. 4:3-6 what time is described here? Is it literal or figurative?
