drive? or lift? up a standard discussion on "lift up a banner" prepositions are the hardest thing to get in any language consonants and vowels are not inspired but words are importance of consonants in Hebrew modern scholars say it means "narrow stream" But a "narrow stream" isn't necessarily a strong stream narrowing a stream doesn't make it faster, but its angle of descent.
 the fact a word is used twice a few vs. apart doesn't prove it has the same meaning, but suggests that meaning is in mind account of how the RSV Committee decided on "Spirit" instead of "wind" in Gen. 1:2
 cont'd
 RSV takes it as "breath of the Lord"
