

15 - had had an interest in Christianity but had felt his own personal efforts should be spent in politics and in government, for which he had great ability. So he was trained in Rome in rhetoric and administration and so on and he had a place in the council in the city of Rome and the time came when he moved along in his life when the officials sent him to be governor in a large area which included the city of Milan. The imperial government of the empire was situated in Milan with a general overall rule over ~~Italy~~ Italy and the other countries, but the actual control of the city of Milan was included in this province which was under a local administrator over Italy. This administrator had his headquarters in Rome. He said to Ambrose as he went to ~~be~~ be governor in Milan, he said "there is a rather turbulent populace in Milan, there are important difficulties there, you might be tempted to simply take the army and establish things with force, but that is not the way to accomplish the best results in the end!" He said - "Go not as the governor but as a bishop", now of course he was using the term in a figurative sense. Be a man who rules by exerting a personal influence over people and doing things for their good rather than any sort of an arbitrary way. He had picked Ambrose because he thought he had the ability to carry out that sort of a government and when Ambrose was there a certain length of time and was well liked by the people for his administration, and when the Arian bishops who had been put in in charge of ~~the city~~ Milan when this Arian bishop died, the time came for the election of a new bishop. There were people in Milan who wanted a man loyal to the orthodox faith and others who wanted an Arian bishop, and people who wanted this sort of man and that sort of man and no man was an outstanding candidate for this bishop of Milan. So the meeting was held and the governor was present with a force of soldiers to put down any sort of confusion or difficulty that might occur and this large meeting of the Christians at Milan was held in order to seek to determine who should be the next bishop of the city and the people nominated different ones and none seemed to have more than 1/6
