Last time, we ~~were examining~~ finished our examination of Isaiah 55: and now for today we are going to start Isaiah 54:. Are we not? If there is either any further questions on Isaiah 55 here/on grammar, syntax or- vocabulary or any meaning at any particular point. There is more to it than we thought of .... We notice a good many interesting things ... And I was very, very ~~a~~ glad about the question about the sign. That ~~is~~ a very vital thing, which when you come across, many other passages that you come across... it is a sort of adjusted to it ... a sort of ... it becomes the second nature. You do not even bother to stop to ~~think of it~~ explain it. Yet, when you do so, when you read this, you subconsciously realize ~~it~~, and then when you call on to stop to explain it, then it becomes more conscious, and more real to you. You see the meaning of it more fully / than before. This was the question very helpful. Yes, Mr. Lee?

(Q) As far as I know, the name in Greek is pretty mucy the same. Both in Hebrew ~~in He-~~ and in Greek.... Now, I have not made a careful study ~~of the-~~ to be sure whether they are identical or not, ~~bt-~~ but this is my impression that they are pretty much identical. They may be used about a sign like when you put a mark on a person's forehead, that is a sign. That is an indication of blood something special. You indicate, when you put the .. / on the door. That was ~~a sign~~ the sign for the angels to pass over and not destroy... ~~This is--~~ these were under the blood. When you give a sign to prove that a man is a real prophet, that is an indication, that is a sign, that is a proof of ~~the~~ reality. And a sign of God's power ... very often supernatural, something that is consequently, / ~~you give a sign to prove that a man is a real prophet. That is a~~ beyond ordinary human ~~hu-~~ understanding. The ~~pre-~~ prediction of ~~fu-~~ future which comes true ... which could not be made by ordinary means. That is a sign. If you do a work / ~~beyond~~ / human ... now the English word that has
