of the second. The third in this case makes ~~ax~~ it a little more obvious that it is a ~~rev~~ relative. The second you might interpret as not a relative ~~but it--~~ since you don't have any ---you could say , give a ringing cry , O barren one, You have not borne. ^B ~~at~~ ~~when-~~ that would read right straight along, but when it is she has not borne , then it is She has not borne, then it makes it quite definite, that ~~is~~ it is a relative . It is not imperfect. It is not ~~ye-e~~ you ~~xq~~ who does not now bare, it is you who has never borne. And that is hard to reconcile ~~k~~ with physical Israel or with the continuing olive tree, this is definitely ~~x~~ the new Gentile ...~~ef-~~ you ...there again you have the third person. It is a relative clause exactly parallel to the previous. you who she has not ..which is an ..but it is often used in Childbirth. Literally it is ..I don't think you can~~x~~ ~~k~~ say there are many. Because that is simply an attributive adj. --that would come after ...this comes before. It would have to beso many are...the sons of a desolate woman...the sons of one~~who-~~ who she is not desolate desolate necessarily, ~~x~~she has more children. ~~X~~ So it can be one who is desolate, and here are the things ..many are the sons of the woman and then what is your next Min. Yes, that may be a warrant to say...the children of the desolate ones are more numerous than many more ...Yes, well, now, if you took that as children of one who is desolate or more than ones /who aren't ...if you say children ~~en-~~ The sons of a desolate woman are the sons of a woman who has been desolate. ^She is not desolate necessarily ~~when~~ she has ~~k~~ more children. She It can be one who is desolate or ~~wen~~ one who has been desolate, many are the sons of the woman who has been desolate. Then what is your next min. Yes, that would give you ~~warrant-~~ warrant to say more. Children of the desolate ones are more ~~number~~ numerous...yes, well, now, if you took that as the children of the one who is desolate than the ones that ...~~awe~~ now, if you say children of one who was desolate are ..they are not more. while she is desolate than
