

are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling which == of God in Christ Jesus.

Always be prepared for the future.

5. Analyze your abilities. I had a friend in Chicago whom I once visited. He met me at the station and I said before we do anything else, I've been asked by someone in Los Angeles to call their cousin and give their greetings. I said let's do it right away. He said, All right, what's the number? I told him. He dialèd it, and I talked to him. A year later I came to Chicago again, and I saw my friend, and the first thing he said was, Are you going to call RAY 7-9264-06 again? I said, Have you been talking with those folks during theyear while I've been away? He said, I never thought of the number between then and now! But hecould remember a number just like that. You tell me a number now, and two minutes from now I haven't the least idea what it is. I go to a phone and I copy a number on a piece of paper and I have it in front of me, and when I call I look at the number as I dial. I have no memory for g figures. But I can remember words.

I can transmute figures into words using a figure alphabet and I can remember any number of figures you want very quickly! I have a little different type of mind that my ffièè friend has there. Now we are all different. We all have abilities in a certain direction and lack of abilities in other areas, but we can learn t o transmute; we can learn to fill up our lack and God wants each one of us to learn to be able to do something in every kind of Christian work because we never know when there is a need that
